

SpeakEnglishPodcast.com

The Podcast That Will Help You Speak English Fluently.

With No Grammar and No Textbooks!

EPISODE #354

Talking about the Weather in English

British vs American
Weather Expressions

Get more lessons at: SpeakEnglishPodcast.com

Hi! I'm Georgiana, and I'm back with a new episode of the Speak English Podcast—the show that helps you speak English fluently, without grammar drills and without textbooks.

Before we dive in, just a quick reminder: you can get the transcript for this episode at SpeakEnglishPodcast.com/podcast.

And if you're enjoying the podcast, please share it with a friend. Honestly, nothing makes me happier than hearing that you've recommended the show to someone else. Thank you so much for spreading the word!

Let me ask you something: what's the easiest way to start a conversation in English?

If you said the weather, you're absolutely right!

It doesn't matter where you are—London, New York, or Paris—at some point, people will always talk about the weather. And it makes sense, right? The weather touches everyone's life. If it's sunny, people feel cheerful. If it rains, people complain. If it snows, kids celebrate while adults worry about traffic. It's a safe, easy way to connect with others.

And fall is perfect for talking about the weather, because it keeps changing! One morning the air is crisp and you think, "A sweater will be enough today." By afternoon, you're too warm in that sweater. And then by evening, the temperature drops, and suddenly you wish you had a big coat and a scarf.

Another reason weather is so popular is because it's neutral. You don't have to know the person well. You can be in an elevator, at a bus stop, or saying hi to a new neighbor. You just say:

"Beautiful day, isn't it?"

Or: "Looks like rain today."

Get more lessons at: SpeakEnglishPodcast.com

And just like that, you've started a conversation. No stress, no awkward silence.

Useful Phrases for Fall 🍂

Let's practice a few simple phrases people use all the time in autumn.

"It's chilly today."

You step outside without a jacket. A cold breeze hits you and you say: "Brrr... it's chilly today."

"The days are getting shorter."

You notice it's already dark at 6 p.m. and you tell your friend: "Wow, the days are getting shorter."

"Looks like rain."

You're waiting for the bus. The sky turns gray and you say: "Hmm, looks like rain."

"The weather changes so fast!"

In the morning it was sunny. By afternoon, it's pouring rain. You shake your head and say: "The weather changes so fast!"

These are not complicated sentences, but they're powerful because people really use them every day. If you practice them, you'll feel more natural and confident.

☁️ British vs American Weather Expressions

Now let's make this fun. Sometimes British and American English use different words for the exact same weather.

Get more lessons at: SpeakEnglishPodcast.com

In the US, people will say: "It's chilly today."
But in the UK, someone might say: "It's a bit nippy this morning, isn't it?"

In New York, you'll hear: "I love the fall colors."
But in London, they'd say: "The colors of autumn are beautiful, aren't they?"

In Chicago, someone might look out the window and say: "Wow, it's raining cats and dogs out there!"
But in London, people usually say: "It's pouring down today!"

An American mom might say: "Don't forget your rain boots."
But a British mom will probably shout: "Don't forget your wellies!"

In the US, you'll hear: "The sky is cloudy. Looks like rain."
But in the UK, it's more common to say: "The sky's overcast. Looks like rain."

When it suddenly turns cold:
In the US they'll say: "A cold front is moving in tomorrow."
But in the UK, people say: "We're having a cold snap this week."

Now, let's practice with a mini-story.

Mini-Story

(Practice your speaking)

I'll tell you a short story, then I'll ask you questions. After each question, you'll answer out loud. Then I'll confirm the correct answer. This helps you think in English and improve your speaking.

Get more lessons at: SpeakEnglishPodcast.com

If you want to practice more, get my
Premium Courses:

SpeakEnglishPodcast.com/courses

Ready? Let's go!

An American student was visiting London in the autumn, a season when it can be sunny, rainy, windy, and freezing—all in the same hour.

Who was visiting London?

An American student. He was visiting London in the autumn.

Before leaving the house, his British friend warned him very seriously:

“Don’t forget your wellies. It’s going to be wet today.”

Who gave him this serious warning?

His British friend. His friend warned him.

What did the friend say?

The friend said: “Don’t forget your wellies. It’s going to be wet today.”

But the American student had never heard the word wellies in his life. He didn’t understand it at all.

Did he understand wellies?

No! He didn’t understand the word wellies.

What did he think wellies were? Shoes?

No, he didn’t think they were shoes. He thought maybe wellies were some kind of delicious British snack—maybe cookies with chocolate. He had no idea!

Get more lessons at: SpeakEnglishPodcast.com

Instead of asking, he just smiled politely and said, “Oh yes, of course... my wellies... sure.” He had no clue.

Did he ask his friend what wellies were?

No! He didn’t ask. He pretended to know. Big mistake!

So, what did he wear? Sneakers or rain boots? Sneakers! He wore sneakers, because he didn’t realize wellies meant rain boots.

A few hours later, the British weather showed its true power. Suddenly, it didn’t drizzle a little—it poured! It poured like the sky had a personal problem with him.

Did it drizzle just a little?

No, not at all. It poured like crazy. Real London rain!

The streets filled with puddles so big, they looked like swimming pools for ducks. His sneakers were instantly soaked.

What happened to his sneakers? Were they dry or soaked?

Soaked! Completely soaked, like two sponges.

When he finally arrived, his friend saw him dripping wet and laughed out loud.

Did the friend cry or laugh?

He laughed. The British friend laughed a lot.

What did the friend say?

He said: “I told you! You needed your wellies!”

At that moment, the American student finally discovered the truth: wellies are not cookies, they were rain boots.

What are wellies?

Rain boots. Wellies are rain boots in British English.

The best part is that now, whenever it rains in the U.S., his friends always tease him. They shout: “Hey, don’t forget your wellies!” and everyone laughs.

Do his friends ignore him or tease him?

They tease him. They say: “Don’t forget your wellies!”

All right. That’s the end of the story. Listen to this mini-story many times to improve your speaking! See you in the next lesson!

If you want to practice more, get my

Premium Courses:

👉 SpeakEnglishPodcast.com/courses

Georgiana

founder of SpeakEnglishPodcast.com

Get more lessons at: SpeakEnglishPodcast.com